

RUN, HERRING, RUN

AN ADULT'S GUIDE TO HER YOUNG

The ocean is vast,
the ocean is deep,

GEOFFREY GILMOUR-TAYLOR, FLICKR/CC

Whale attack!

TICK
TOCK

no place for small fry...
our offspring... to sleep.

COLIN ROBSON

When the time comes,
and you feel the urge,
the map's in your brain,
just follow Spring's surge.

It's Spring...
Run, Herring, run!

Ahh, the sweet smell of home!

Go back to our home,
you'll know by the smell,
You and the others just follow the trail.

Closer closer

There's strength in numbers, and the dangers are great, so keep to your school...and don't hesitate!

JACOB BOETTER
FLICKR

Our numbers were greater long long ago...
We ran in the millions up every river flow.

WOW!

Where did everyone go?

AND VISITORS CENTER

But we're far fewer now, barely holding our own,
nature's balance is tipped, we make less of a show.

Swim quick and go fast, stay together in your run.
Run back to our home where your young can have fun.

Whose tail is that???

DANGER!

YOWZAA!

Watch out for whales, watch out for nets,
Watch out for striped bass,
and NUCLEAR POWER PLANTS!

NOAA FISHWATCH

Look out...there's another net!

It will be a hard trip (and many may not make it!)

You've bathed in sea salt, now adapt and foresake it!
Circle in groups, pause in pools...and shake it.

Then speed upriver toward home,
let your freshwater memories room.

Pass the salt, please...NO,
Bubbles...ease off!

HEROES

DUANE RAYER
USFWS

Raccoons grab, and heron beaks spear ospreys snag, and eagle claws rip.

You who survive will be heroes for sure,
living to spawn,
boosting our numbers next year.

DAVE INGRAM

Lay your eggs fast, as many as you can,

Millions and Billions!

then follow your map again,
downriver... off land.

WELCOME!

Many eggs will be eaten... feeding creatures big and small.

But our fry that survive
will join us by Fall.

Welcome back to sea...
welcome back all!
